AGAINST

LOUIS XVI.

IN the National Convention of France* on the 17th 18th and 19th days of January, 1793, the three following Questions were successively put to the vote.

QUESTION THE FIRST.

Is LOUIS guilty or not?

Of the 745 Members of the Convention 20 were absent, 5 sick, 27 gave modified opinions, 693 voted in the affirmative.

President—I declare in the name of the National Convention LOUIS CAPET to be found guilty of a conspiracy against the liberty of the nation, and of an attempt to disturb the public security.

* N. B. In this Convention 76 were Ex-Nobles; between 50 and 60 Ex-Priests; the rest consisted of Lawyers, Merchants, Husbandmen, and a great number of Artisans, men who had no property, but what they acquired by spoil from the rich.

QUESTION THE SECOND.

Shall the sentence to be passed upon LOUIS be referred to the sanction of the people?

The result of the appel nominal on this question was; 3 sick; 20 absent; 10 refused to vote; 283 voted for, and 424 against it.

President—I declare in the name of the National Convention, that its sentence shall not be submitted to an appeal to the People.

QUESTION THE THIRD.

What punishment shall be inflicted upon LOUIS?

The Appel nominal for the Definitive Sentence,
by DEPARTMENTS.

N. B. The first Column expresses the name and quality of the voters; the second, the manner in which they gave their votes; in the third, those who voted for Death absolutely are distinguished by the mark †; those for Death with restrictions as to the time, by the letter D; those for detention, banishment, &c. by the letter O; absentees by (a); not voted by (nv); sick by (m); the fourth column shews the fate or punishment of many of the members; A signifying assassinated; G guillotined; I imprisoned; M massacred; P proscribed; and S suicides.

| Marcy | The Convention may set it- self up for a jury; but it can be only to judge the crime, and not the criminal. To pass a definitive judge- ment upon Louis is, in my opinion, an outrage against the definitive will of the Nation. To pronounce sen- tence of death, is an usur- pation of the right of the Sovereign. I will not be a judge—I cannot, and I ought not to be one. Representa- | | | | | tives of the people! You have destroyed the Despot; suffer the Man to live. Let him drag in captivity a groveling life. You are the depositaries of French honor.

Europe has her eyes upon you. Posterity is advancing.

It will judge you, and its voice will pass through ages.

Rameau

It is not in your power to give me the quality of judge, which I have not received from the Sovereign. Accordingly I do not think myself bound by this monstrous decree.

Of the two punishments proposed to be inflicted on Louis, I choose the mildest, that is, detention.

O

Champeaux

My constituents have deputed me to make laws, and not to judge.

O

Guyomard

The re-union of all powers characterises despotism, whether it be in an individual, or in a body of men. It is bad policy to multiply the number of our enemies fourfold, and to lavish the blood of our brethren. Shall we then, by punishing Louis, augment the list of victims still more? I vote for confinement. O

Gondelin I am not afraid of menaces. I am ready to sacrifice my blood for my country. I vote, according to my conscience, for detention. O

R E S U L T OF THE THIRD SCRUTINY.

PRESIDENT VERGNIAULT.

CITIZENS!

“ I am going to pronounce the sen“ tence of rigor against Louis. When Justice has “ spoken, humanity should then make her voice
“ heard. I intreat the Members and the Tribune
“ to observe profound silence. The Assembly is “ composed of 745 Members : 1 of these is dead—
“ 6 are sick—2 absent without assigning any rea“ son—11 are absent with leave—4 have not “ voted; the total is 24, which, being deducted
“ from 745, there remain 721 voters, of whom
“ the absolute majority is 361.

“ Twenty-three are for Death, leaving the
“ time of it to be discussed hereafter.

“ 9 for Death, with respite.

“ 2 for Death, after a peace.

“ 2 for Chains.

“ 319 for Confinement.

“ 366 for Death.

“ CITIZENS,

“ The Punishment pronounced
“ against Louis is DEATH.”

The Names of the abovementioned Voters in Alphabetical Order.

The APPEAL of LOUIS XVI.

“ I owe it to my own honor, I owe it
 “ to my family, not to subscribe to an accusation
 “ which I have not merited. I declare therefore,
 “ that I bring an appeal to the nation at large
 “ from the judgment passed against me; and I “ give to my defenders all necessary powers, in “ order that this present appeal may be inserted in
 “ the Journals of the Convention.”

Refused!

The ADDRESS of Monf. de Seze, one of the Defenders of the King, to the Convention.

“ The ratification by the French peo“ ple, which Louis demands, is the exercise of a “ natural and sacred right which belongs to every “ person accused; it is the right of every man,
 “ and consequently of Louis. If we did not pre“ fer this claim in his defence, it was because it
 “ was not in our power to foresee that the National “ Convention would resolve upon judging him;
 “ or, if it did judge him, that it would condemn
 “ him. We now learn, that the fatal decree
 “ which condemns Louis to death, has been car“ ried by a majority of five votes only. Permit
 “ me, Citizens, to represent to you in the name

“ of humanity, in the name of that sacred prin“ ciple, which calls for every mitigation in favor
 “ of the accused, that this circumstance, so very “ extraordinary, may well engage you voluntarily
 “ to accede to the proposed ratification. I de“ mand it in the name of Justice, in the name of “ our country, in the name of humanity. Exer“ cise your own high powers; but do not astonish
 “ France by the exhibition of a judgment that “ must appear terrible, when the surprising mino“ rity comes to be considered.

“ Citizens, permit me to adjure you once more
 “ in the name of Louis XVI. and to conclude “ with suggesting to you, whether, whilst you are “ contending for the security of the Nation, and “ its real interests, you will not tremble, when “ you reflect, that the safety of the Republic, the “ security of the French Empire, and the happi“ ness of twenty-five millions of people may possi-
 “ bly depend upon five votes.”

4th Appel Nominal.

The object of this fourth appel was to know whether the execution of Louis might be deferred; 310 were for respite, and 380 against it. Thus by a majority of 70 votes it was decreed, that the sentence against Louis XVI. should be executed without delay.

The EXECUTION of LOUIS XVI.

21st JANUARY, 1793.

The Minister of Justice and the heads of the administrative Corps, having proceeded to the Temple on Sunday the 20th of January, about four in the evening, notified to Louis the warrant for his execution. “ I demand,” said the King, “ a respite of three days to prepare myself for appearing before God. To assist me in this work, I desire to have Mr. Edgeworth (an Irish Clergyman) with whom I may freely communicate. I desire that he may be secured from all uneasiness, or apprehension, on account of this charitable office which he shall perform for me. I desire to be relieved from that perpetual watch which the Council General has set over me for some days. I demand in this interval the privilege of seeing my family when I shall desire it, and without witnesses. I could also wish, that the Convention would, as speedily as may be, set about determining the fate of my family, and permit them to see each other freely and commodiously, when they shall think proper.

“ I recommend to the liberality of the nation all those persons who have been attached to me. Among my pensioners there are many aged men, women, and children, who have no other means of subsistence,”

Of all these requisitions Louis obtained only that of seeing his family without witnesses. It was the first time since his imprisonment. The interview lasted two hours. It is impossible to express the horror of the moment, when he was obliged to tear himself away from them. On his return to his apartment, the King passed almost the whole of the night in prayer. He then lay down and slept a few hours, and early in the morning betook himself again to prayer.

The 21st of January, at half past eight o'clock, Santerre, the Commandant General, came to signify to Louis the order for his going to execution. Having requested three minutes to speak with his confessor, he then turned to Santerre, and told him, that he was ready to follow him.

The King crossed the first court of the Temple on foot; he then entered the coach of Pethion, the Mayor of Paris, with his Confessor and two Gendarmes. His route lay along the Boulevards, which were lined with above two hundred thousand men in arms. All the way Louis was deeply engaged in reading the prayers appointed for persons at the point of death.

Being arrived at the Place de Louis XV. which was the place of execution, about ten o'clock in the morning, he alighted from the carriage with calmness, took off his clothes himself, remaining in his white under waistcoat, untied his cravat, and opened the collar of his shirt; he then threw himself upon his knees to receive the last benediction of his Confessor, got up immediately after, and ascended the scaffold alone. At that moment his Confessor cried out to him, "Son of St. Louis, you are going up to Heaven!"

Far from opposing those who came to cut off his hair, and bind his hands, "Do with me," said he, "what you will, it is the last sacrifice." He then made a motion with his hand to obtain silence.—"I die perfectly innocent of all the pretended crimes laid to my charge—I forgive all those who have had any hand in my misfortunes, and I pray that my blood may be of use in restoring happiness to France—And you, unhappy people!"

At these words the unfeeling Santerre gave orders that the drums should beat, crying out to the King, "that he had not brought him there to declaim, but to die." At that instant his head was severed from his body!

The corpse was immediately conveyed to the Magdalene Burying Ground, and thrown into a pit twelve feet deep, into which a considerable quantity of quick lime was cast.

It is said, that after crying out, "Vive la Nation!" "Vive la Republique!" some volunteers dipped their pikes, and others their handkerchiefs, in the blood of the victim. One person alone had the courage to cry out, Grace, and was instantly cut down with a sabre.

Thus died Louis XVI. King of France and Navarre. He was born the 23d of August, 1754, ascended the throne the 10th of May, 1774, and reigned eighteen years and three months.

The following dates relative to the destiny of this prince have been brought together and contrasted.

21st April, 1770, Marriage of Louis at Vienna, and Delivery of the Ring.

21st June, 1770, Great rejoicings at Paris on account of his marriage.

21st January, 1772, Festival doings in the city on account of the birth of the first Dauphin.

21st June, 1791, The King's departure, or rather flight to Varennes.

21st September, 1792, Abolition of Royalty.

21st January, 1793, Louis beheaded.

The Last Will of LOUIS XVI.

IN the name of the most holy Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, this day, the 25th of December, 1792, I, Louis XVI. by name, King of France, having been four months shut up with my family in the Tower of the Temple, at Paris, by those who were my subjects, and deprived of all communication whatever, even, since the 11th of this month, with my family; being moreover involved in a trial, of which it is impossible to foresee the issue, on account of the passions of men, and for which there is no pretence nor motive in any existing law, having none but God for witness to my thoughts, and to whom I can address myself, I here declare in his presence my last will and sentiments.

I leave my Soul to God my creator; I beseech him to receive it in his mercy; not to judge it according to its merits, but to those of our Lord Jesus Christ, who offered himself as a sacrifice to God his Father for us men, unworthy of it as we are, and I more than any.

I die in the faith of our holy mother the catholic, apostolic, and Roman Church, which derives her powers in an uninterrupted succession from St. Peter, to whom Jesus Christ had entrusted them; I firmly believe and acknowledge all that is contained in the apostles creed, the commandments of God and of the church; the sacraments and mysteries, such as the Catholic Church teaches, and has always taught them: I never pretended to be a judge of the different modes of explaining the dogmas which divide the church of Jesus Christ; but I have always trusted, and shall always trust, if God grants me life, to the decisions that the ecclesiastical superiors, together with the holy catholic church, give and shall give, according to the discipline of the Church since Jesus Christ. I pity with all my heart our brethren who may be in error, but I do not pretend to judge them; nor do I love them the less in Jesus Christ, according to what christian charity teaches us, and I pray God to forgive me all my sins: I have scrupulously sought to know them, to detest them, and to humble myself in his presence. Not being permitted to make use of the ministry of a catholic priest, I pray God to receive the confession which I have made to him of them; and above all, my sincere repentance for having put my name (though against my will) to acts that may be contrary to the discipline and faith of the catholic church, to which I have always been sincerely and faithfully united. I pray God to accept my firm resolution, if he grants me life, to make use as soon as possible of the ministry of a catholic priest, that I may accuse myself of all my sins, and receive the sacrament of penance. I beseech all those whom I may have inadvertently offended, (for I do not remember to have knowingly given offence to any person) and those to whom I may have given bad examples, or caused scandal, to forgive the injuries they think I may have done them.

I implore all charitable persons to join their prayers to mine, to obtain from God the pardon of my sins; I, with all my heart, forgive those who are become my enemies, although I have not given them any reason to be so; and I beseech God to forgive them, as well as those who through a false or mistaken zeal, have brought many misfortunes on me.

I recommend to God, my wife and children; my sisters, my aunts, my brothers, and all those who are attached to me, either by the ties of blood, or in any other way whatever. I particularly beseech God to cast a merciful eye on my wife, my children, and my sister, who have long suffered with me, to support them by his grace, if they should happen to lose me, and as long as they remain in this perishable world.

I recommend my children to my wife; I never doubted her maternal tenderness for them. I above all recommend to her to make them good christians, and honest people; to make them consider the grandeurs of this world (if they be condemned to possess them) only as dangerous and perishable possessions, and to direct their attention to eternity, the only solid and durable glory. I beg of my sister to continue her tenderness to my children, and to be a mother to them, if they should have the misfortune of losing her who is such.

I intreat my wife to forgive me all the afflictions she suffers for my sake, and the sorrows I may have given her in the course of our union; as she may be certain that I have no fault to find with her, even where she may think she has cause to reproach herself.

I earnestly recommend to my children, after what they owe to God, (which is the first of all duties) to live always in harmony with one another, to be submissive and obedient to their mother, and grateful to her for all the care and trouble she takes for them out of regard to my memory. I desire them to consider my sister as their second mother.

I recommend to my Son, if he has the misfortune to become King, to remember that he owes himself entirely to his fellow citizens; that he must forget all hatred and resentment, and particularly all that relates to the misfortunes and afflictions that I endure; that he can only make the people happy by reigning according to the laws, but at the same time, that a King cannot make himself respected, and do all the good he wishes, without having the necessary authority; and that otherwise being restrained in his operations, and not inspiring respect, he is rather hurtful than useful.

I recommend to my Son to take as much care of all those persons who were attached to me, as the circumstances he may be in will allow him; to recollect that it is a sacred debt which I have contracted towards the children or the relations of those who have died for me, and those who suffer for my sake. I know that there are several persons among those who ought to have been attached to me, who have not acted towards me as they ought, and have even been ungrateful towards me; but I forgive them, (often in times of trouble and confusion, men are not masters of themselves) and I beg my Son, if he finds the opportunity, to think only of their misfortunes.

I wish I could here give a testimony of my gratitude to those who have shewn a true and disinterested affection for me. If, on the one hand, I have been sensibly affected with the ingratitude and disloyalty of those, to whom I had shewn at all times only kindness — to them, their relations, or friends; on the other hand, I have had the consolation to receive proofs of disinterested affection and regard from several others. I beg them to accept my best thanks.

In the present state of things, I should fear to expose them if I spoke more explicitly; but I particularly recommend to my Son to embrace every opportunity of discovering them.

Nevertheless I think I should wrong the national feelings, if I were not openly to recommend to my Son Messieurs De Chamilly and Hue, whose sincere affection for me induced them to shut themselves up with me in this melancholy abode, and who ran the risque of being the unfortunate victims of their attachment. I also recommend Cleri, with whose attentions I have had all reasons to be satisfied ever since he has been with me. As he is the person who has remained with me to the last, I request Messieurs de la Commune to give him my cloaths, my books, and the other trifles which have been deposited at the Council of the Commune.

I also very willingly forgive those who guarded me, for their ill treatment, and the constraint which they thought necessary to keep me under. I have found some feeling and compassionate minds; may they enjoy in their hearts the pleasure that their turn of thinking must afford them.

I request Messieurs De Malsherbes, Tronchet, and De Seze, to receive my best thanks, and assurances of my gratitude for all the care and attention they have shewn me.

I conclude with declaring before God, being ready to appear before him, that I cannot reproach myself with any of those crimes that have been laid to my charge.

Made and copied in the Tower of the Temple, the 25th of December, 1792.

(Signed)

LOUIS.
